Every so often I write a blog post where I recommend a product that I am using or that I'm testing on a trial basis. The review is my own opinion based on my own user experience of the product. If I like the product I will include an affiliate link that points to the website, marketplace or vendor where you can purchase the product or test it for yourself.

In return for sending traffic to the website, marketplace or vendor, I may receive complimentary services, products or a small monetary commission.

Should you decide to purchase the product after reading a review and using a link from my website, your purchase does not cost you anything more or less. It's a thank you from the vendor. In some cases, you may earn a discount on your purchase.

I will never write a review or recommend a product in the hopes of making loads of money from an affiliate link.
